Damien Robinson, Ed.D., is a strategic leader and education advocate who has devoted his life's work to creating pathways to quality degrees and career development for underrepresented students. With more than 12 years of both education and leadership experience, Dr. Robinson has served a diverse array of student population across the K-12 to College pipeline.

As a higher education practitioner, Dr. Robinson has been instrumental in developing and implementing flagship college pathway programs, including the Achieving Collegiate Excellence and Success (ACES) program at Montgomery College in Maryland. With his leadership and fierce commitment to student success, ACES has served more than 5,000 low-income, first-generation students with college transitional support. Beyond his programmatic expertise, Dr. Robinson served as Director of Special Education at the Orchard School District, leading the development of equitable and inclusive assessments for students of color.

As the Founder of DMRC & Associates, an education, culture, and diversity consulting firm, Dr. Robinson works directly with institutions, companies, and organizations to help create cultural shifts in organizational practices that lead to greater future success.

Dr. Robinson holds a B.S. in Psychology from Howard University, M.A. in Counseling from San Diego State University, and an Ed.D. in Education Leadership from San Francisco State University.
